About Amy Mager

Dipl. Oriental Medicine (NCCAOM)

Lactation Counsellor

Amy's study of Acupuncture and Chinese Medicine began after these treatments provided her life-changing benefits from her own chronic pain and illness.

Amy's eight years of professional education includes a four-year Master of Science program at the American College of Traditional Chinese Medicine; with Master Herbalist Dr. Yat-Ki Lai and studies at the Post-Graduate Institute of Oriental Medicine in Hong Kong.

We are each what we eat, what we feel, what we think about and how we react to the environment around us. Every thought we have, every emotion we experience has a direct biochemical reaction in the body. It is my goal to develop a personalized, respectful healing partnership with you to support you and your healing process.

"I saw Amy to treat pain and spasm from complications of a surgery. I was in constant, chronic pain. My work with her enabled me to function at a higher level and to be in less pain with an increase in flexibility. I am grateful for her skill, thoughtfulness and compassion."
